the girl thinking that the woman might be her mother, went to her home, summoned her father and he came out with a lantern to look around and about that time Miss Marshall was found; that the two men had disappeared in the meantime and his conclusion was that they were undoubtedly the men whose automobile had struck the Marshall girl. However, he traced out the whereabouts of the girl's mother (that is the drunkard) on the night in question. In the course of his investigation he learned that she frequently visited some people who lived in Mrs. Easton's house. He therefore called upon Mrs. Easton and requested her to see what she could learn from her tenants. Pilger says that Mrs. Easton was not a witness to any material facts in the case, nor did she ever pretend to be. He claims that he never knew of her running a disorderly house.

I called upon Lewis R. Bond of 11 East Bridge Street, Morrisville, Pa. Bond is an attorney. He informed me that a number of years ago he was selling various goods at auction to wind up an estate and Mrs. Easton came to Morrisville and bid in between $30 and $40 worth of articles. Instead of paying for them, she got them aboard of her wagon and drove over the bridge to Trenton. As he recalls, he was not able to collect from her. When he saw the "Pig Woman's" picture in the newspapers he immediately connected her with the Mrs. Easton whom he had had dealings with.

Bond is recovering from injuries he sustained in an automobile accident. He said when he is able to get around, if we so desire, he will go over his records and furnish all facts connected with the transaction. I told him that we would write if we desired him to do so.

Respectfully yours,
